What is PotCoin?

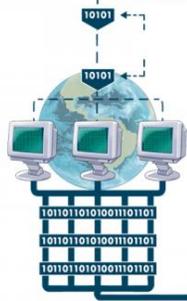

A digital currency. It has no central monetary authority. Instead, a peer-to-peer computer network maintains transactions and "creates" PotCoins through a process called mining. Users and their transactions are anonymous; there are no international exchange rates, and no middlemen to collect fees.

How does it work?

PotCoin transactions are processed through a PotCoin wallet, an app that users download and install on their computers or smartphones.

Wallet: Client program stores each PotCoin's unique online registration number and address, a virtual postbox to and from which PotCoins are sent. PotCoins can be purchased using real money, but they can also be generated or "mined".

Users generate PotCoins (Mining) by having their computers solve difficult mathematical algorithms (Blockchain) that help verify the creation and distribution of new PotCoins and the transfer of PotCoins between users.

Blockchain: A system secured by a cryptographic algorithm that contains a coded series of numbers and letters, a difficult to solve mathematical puzzle. Blocks create a database of all transactions between PotCoin users.

What is Cryptocurrency?

A cryptocurrency is a digital medium of exchange. Cryptocurrencies make it easier to transfer funds between two parties in transactions facilitated through the use of public and private keys for security purposes. These fund transfers are done with minimal processing fees, enabling users to avoid the steep fees charged by most banks and financial institutions for wire transfers.

Just Ask Tony!

Tony Verzura, River Rock Chief Operations Officer "We strongly feel there is a future for cryptocurrency within our specialized industry. Our business requires 100% transparency and accountably - exactly like a regulated casino, so this presents operations and security problems as we deal with lots of cash. PotCoin has developed a secure way for us to deal with our unique situation."
